Auto Inspection About Normal

Richmond, Va.- Despite an extended spell of rainy weather which has covered nearly all of the state, Captain R. B. King, State Police Safety Officer, noted today that inspections of motor vehicles are running just about normal, when compared with the same period of last year.

During wet weather, Captain King observed, it is impractical to perform inspections as, generally speaking, dampness interferes with braking action and the Code of Virginia (Section 46-284) requires that standards be met on a "dry, hard . . stretch of highway."

"Invariably there is a rush when the inspection period first opens which subsides into a mid - period lull and developes into a rush again as the deadline approaches," he said. "This year, the lull and the rainy period have coincided with the result that there has been no appreciable curtailment of inspections."

As matters now stand, Captain King gave scant hope for an extension of the period for passenger automobiles which ends at midnight November 15. "We have some 2,000 stations to do the job, and, in the absence of any material worsening of the situation, ample time remains to serve everyone if motorists will take advantage of the earliest opportunities possible to present their cars for inspection. In any event, the Department of State Police will continue to observe developments with the intention of serving the best interests of the public," he concluded.

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note: Here are questions asked most frequently by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members of the VPI Agricultural Extension Service and Experiment Station supply the answers.)

Q. When should I sell my beef cows that I want to cull since I've waited this late?

A. Hold them as long as you have grass. If you're short on feed now, sell them now, and save your feed for your breeding herd.

How much gain should I plan to put on my feeder calves and yearling steers this winter for reconsignment to sale next spring and fall?

A. Try to keep them gaining at the rate of 3/4 to one pound a day. A full feed of roughage, plus a pound of cottonseed or soybean meal and two pounds of corn and cob meal a day, should do it.

Q. When is the price of hogs expected to start upward?

A. Hog prices should begin going up in late December, and January. Generally, seasonal peaks in hog slaughter are accompanied by prices below average; the reverse is true when hog slaughter is below average. Seasonal changes in marketing of slaughter hogs are related mainly to the farrowing pattern. Farrowings in Virginia are usually largest in March and September.

Should I graze my sudan and alfalfa now?

Frosted or frozen sudan should not be grazed until it is completely dry and there is no evidence of new growth. Alfalfa can be grazed after frost, but leave enough growth to protect the crowns during the winter, and don't let the animals overeat.

Is it necessary to treat beef calves for internal parasites?

A. If there is a history of parasite infestation on the farm, it is a good idea to treat the calves as a routine part of management. All livestock breeders should be alert for symptoms of internal parasites. If they appear, consult a veterinarian and treat according to his directions. Some of the symptoms are slow weight gains, rough hair coat, teary eyes, and bloody diarrhea.

What can I do about grubs in my lawn?

A. A treatment of chlordane should solve the problem. Use according to the manufacturer's recommendations. Since it is too late in the season now, it will probably be better to wait and apply the chlordane as soon as the ground begins to warm up in the spring.

Q. How can I keep the weevils out of my corn in an open crib?

A. You can't! But you can keep infestations to a minimum my thoroughly cleaning the crib and spraying with DDT before putting the corn in. The best thing to do is to store shelled, dry corn in tight bins.

RECEIPTS FROM GAME FINES WILL GO TO LITERARY FUND

Under the State Constitution, fines assessed and collected in misdemeanor cases go into the literary fund of the state. According to L. T. Quinn, Executive Director of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, the amount of $66,-840.50 for the year ending June 30, 1956, was assessed and collected by the courts from violators of the game, inland fish, and dog laws and covered into the literary fund to be used to help educate the youth of the state.

In addition to the $66,840.50 in fines, the violators also paid an amount in the sum of 35,470.28 in costs, or a total of $102,310.78 in penalties for violations of the game, inland fish, and dog laws in Virginia.

Subscription rate: $2.00 a year; payable in advance.

OF INTEREST TO VETERANS

Veterans of World Wars I and II who have been able to keep their government insurance received some good news the other day in the form of Veterans Administration announcement about 1957 insurance dividends. For the first time in 25 years policyholders of 5 year term U. S. Government Life Insurance, which originated in WW I, will receive a dividend.

The VA estimates that there are about 20,000 WW II veterans with USGLI, 5 year term, who will share in approximately $1,000,000. Some 330,000 veterans of WW I with permanent types of USGLI will participate in another $25,000,000 in dividends.

It was also announced that another dividend on National Service Life Insurance to WW II veterans will be paid in 1957. Next year's dividend of $210,000,000, an increase of $25,000,000 over the 1956 dividend, will go to some 5,000,000 veterans of WW II who have in force either term or permanent types of NSLI.

Distribution of these insurance dividends is automatic and no application of any kind is necessary. If the procedure of former years is followed, payment will be made about two months following the anniversary date of the policy.

OAK WILT IN VIRGINIA

Four successive years of aerial surveys have shown that oak wilt, a destructive fungus disease, is distributed in the forests and woodlots of at least eight northwestern and two southwestern Virginia counties. By far the heaviest concentration is known to occur in the counties bordering West Virginia from Bath County northward through Frederick County.

The 1956 aerial survey indicated no particular increase in range of infection over past years, but was noteworthy because it failed to show additional new infections in the areas in Bath and Highland Counties where heavy infection was noted in 1953 and 1954. This failure to note new infections following repeated flights over suspect areas in these two counties gives hope for the eventual success of the control program which has been in progress in Virginia during the past two years. Fifty-six hours were spent in the air and portions of 19 counties were surveyed. The areas of known heavy infection were covered twice and in one case by three times during July and August.

No forest tree disease since the chestnut blight has created so much national interest or resulted in as much time spent on research, survey and control activities than the oak wilt disease. Pennsylvania is spending approximately $50,000 a year, and West Virginia is presently embarked on state-wide survey and control programs.

COOKED BY BOLT

Owingsville, Ky.- Mrs. Robert Toy was cooking sweet potatoes on her electric range when a bolt of lightning struck the pan of potatoes and cooked them to a crisp. That wouldn't have been so bad, but the bolt also burned a hole in the pan and damaged the heating element under it.

This Is It

Lesson for November 11, 1956

THREE questions are asked over and over again by people who take life seriously but are still looking for the answers. First, "Is there a God?" Is it altogether a matter of taste? Is there anything that is never good and anything that is always? Is it no matter whether or not Second-rate gods exist? What difference does it make to us? What difference does it make to him? Is there any simple, sensible way of knowing what God wants? Third, Why doesn't God speak to us as he used to speak to the prophets of old? Why doesn't God, who knows all the answers, share his knowledge with us?

Early Preacher

Long ago a country preacher had some questions thrown up at him. His name was Micah. He was not a preacher in the regular sense, for he had no church, and in fact he had no connection with the regular Jewish religion of his country. But he did speak and preach,—so far as we know, only to his fellow-villagers; but what he said was remembered. We have extracts from his sermons in what we call the Book of Micah, among the books of the Old Testament. Maybe he wasn't exactly a full-length formal preacher. Maybe he just stood or sat around in the market-place, and talked to any who would listen. At any rate it is plain that he was asked much the same questions as the three just now mentioned. The country of Judah, in which Micah's small town of Moreshah was located, was either in a very dangerous condition or was running full speed down,—depending on where you stood. In the capital city of Jerusalem everything seemed to be booming. But in the farmlands and in the little villages it was a different story. Even in the cities there were some who suspected that the boom would not last. There was a kind of revival of interest in religion going on, but it was shallow. People had an idea they ought to be better, but what was better? They felt sure they ought to know God more carefully; but what did God want, really? Why doesn't God come right out and tell us what they would have to do to be "right" with him?

Micah

The answers to such questions as these were written on gold tablets in a strange language and buried on top of a seven-mile mountain guarded by seven wise archangels. The roads to that mountain would be jammed, and people would pay the archangels big fees to translate the mystic words of wisdom. But a country preacher talking in the simple words anybody ten years old can understand—? Yes; the people of Micah's village already had the answers, only they didn't realize it. Why doesn't God speak? He has spoken. Why don't we read the prophets! We do have prophets right there in your Bible. Yes, they are hard to understand! But Micah says, it's not so hard to understand. What does the Lord require of you but to do justice, to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God? Oh, someone in the crowd might say,—that! Yes, exactly. Amos the prophet spoke of Justice, and Hosea spoke of Love and Kindness, and Isaiah spoke of humility before God Most High. This is it, and it doesn't need to write away to God. This is it right here. What God wants of us, has already spoken. He does not change his mind.

Last and Final

Micah hit at one way, these three great requirements of God are simple. Justice—how easy to say, how hard to make sure that it really the just and fair thing in every action! Kindness—but who knows what is the kind to do every time? Isn't it just in one case perhaps to be another? Yes, to be sure; but the embodiment of God is going to save us from having to think. It is not so simple as to be automatic. Nevertheless this is simple enough. We can see the lines which mark the good life must be. We always know: if it is not kind, if it is not just, then it is out of harmony with God's will. And all this comes back again not in the sense of leaving us any further thought, but in the sense that this is the Word. We can't now or ever go beyond or above,—we can't get away from—Justice and kindness and humble reverence before God.
